The Next Sensation It is rumored, by that social gossip, which never fails to find its way from one part of the world to another, however dis ant, that the young Marquis of Bute, just come of age, means to pay a visit to the nited States. He is said to he handsome and cultivated, and is the richest subject in all lingland. His income amounts to 300,000% a year, which, expand ed to dollars and watered into currency making due allowance for a fair rate o exchange, would yield a net of nearly $2,460,000 of annual revenues springing rom perfectly trustworthy and improving rces. Two or three Scotch counties or three Welsh baronies, and any number of iron mines, coal pite, dock yards, fishing ports, and railway shares are embraced by the title deeds which his lordship in herits. He is three times as rich as the Prince of Wales. The Queen herself has only about a fifth as much to spend in her wn right as this swashing ares normous swell, this veritable King of the Nor is his money all. He is lord of ardiff Castle and Master of Cardiff town, the second port of entry in Great Britain, and can walk through a picture gallery half as long as the Hall of Lonis Quatre, at Versailles, and hung round with five cenuries of ancestral barons, knights, and sheriffs, including a Prime Minister ofthe realm, famons as the preceptor of oll George the Third, and a royal groom, who fell on Flodden field. Is he to come and go as the Prince of Wales came and went? Is he to be permitted, like that renowned King of France, to march, with all his forces, up the hill and then march down again? Forbid it neaven! Forbid dit, women of America!

The Paschall drawing is over. This is it, and, most impudent and stupid of all, to represent it as authority for the payment of the five-twenty bonds in coin. They hard the message at Mr. Seymour's own head. Now mark the con-

At three o'clock yesterday af ern according to postponement, the prelimi-nary examination of Easper Weingart ner, accused of having murdered Henry Milier on the Bardstown road, at a point Miller on the bands of the city, ias: Monday morning, commenced before Esquires Clement and Matlack, atting as a Magistrates' Court. So dense was th crowd that gathered in Justice Matiack's office that it became necessary to try the case in the City Court room. There also an immense throng assembled to hear the proceedings. Weir gertaer was represented by Judge Burnett, W. G. Reaser, and Gen. Whitt-aker, and the Commonwealth by Jo. G. Wilson, County Attorney, and J. R. W. Smith, Feq. The counsel for the State nade known that they were not ready to ry the case, and asked for its continu ance two days to enable them to produce important testimony and otherwise pre-pare for the trial. Nearly an hour was consumed in the argument of this motion by the attorneys on each side, when the court ruled that the examination anonid

At an early honr on Monday rning last, Mr. Weingartner, accused, rede up to my house and informed me that his partnar, Henry Miller, had beeu murdered eight miles from the city, on the Bardstown read. I went with him to the top of his head, the hali having passed out tehind the left ear. I had a talk with the accused. Hs told me that he an leit the garden on a to the country to huy produce; that soon after starting Miller laid down in the wagon and fell asleep; that they had not proceeded far when he, too, fell

Ha told me two ciories about the point to which he drove forward after he attack; at one time that he proceeded to the other side of Ferne creek, and at another that he went to the hill between the creek and Louisville. Thence he returned to the White Cottage, voka up tha proprietor, Mr. Demius and related what had happened. He did not tell me why he came back. I exam-ined hie person and found several cuts or tears on his clothing, but no wound upon one of his fingers. (Mr. Moore exhibited the coat and shirts worn by Weingartner and the sack upon which Miller was lying when mnrdered). He stated to me that was on the left side of Miller when they were assailed. I am not certain as to which side he said Miller was lying npon at the time. The hullet went either through tha top of his head and passed out back of his ear, or entered behind the ear and cams out at the top of his head. My opinion is that it passed in at the top of the head. An aperture made by the autrance of a heal the court of the contract of the contra made by the entrance of a ball is amails than hy its egress. A case came up before the City Cou esterday which displeys in a pecnila namer the dangers of the town.

It appears that an old gentieman from ndisna, accompanied by his son, a conth of some sixteen years, visited our city a few days ago on hueiness. The rams of the old genteman is J. W. Steedman. It eppeare that he had on his person the sum of $375 in ready cash, and checke for other amounts. In the course of the old gantament, preserving the course of the old gantament. tieman's peregrinatiene around the city with his son, thay fell in with two gent looking young men, who appeared to take quite an interest in the old gentle-man. They drank together, and finelly made a proposition to him t visit some of the "glittering gen relities" in the upper just of the city.
To this end they started off with the old gentleman, and one of them instructed he son to return to the hotel, and his f ther would join him in the ourse of an hour. Thus they parted—the father to visit a hagnio, and the son to go to their headquarters at the hotel.

The old story now follows. Mr. Stedman wes inveigied into various houses of li-repute, and drank freely in compa with his young "friend," nntil dark when he was in good condition for 'fleecing." After caronsing with him 'fleecing." After caronsing with him up to 9 o'clock on Thursday night, they conducted him to an allay leading from the upper portion of ireston street, where they knocked him down and robbed him of his money amounting to $375. They were evidently in Ignorance of the old man't having the checks on his person, as they were not taken by the precoclous young robbers, in eccumplishing the deed, they were compelled to beat the old man up hadly. tor examination, and the case postpor until this morning.

in the miles above Brandenburg, Ky. Itaring the day the men had made forays smong the seighboring farmers, offering their medical services, and presending to be on the lookout for catables. On Friday norning Jacob L. Kinter, who lives a few miles above, discovered that about thirty or forty hushels of wheat, in secks and ready for shipment to live & Hoyle, of New Alheny, had been carried off in hisskiff. No traces of the robbers were left. A massenger was dispatched helow npon the first boat, but no discoveris were made. On Saturday a couple of men hrought three hags of wheat to be awapped for thur at the mill of Mr. Gillmore, just above Brandenburg, out this side of the river. The milier at once suspected thet he had got on the track of the robbers, end he accordingly told them suspected that he had got on the track of the robbers, and he accordingly told them that he could grind tha wheat for them in a few days, but he had no flour to exchange for it. Upon trining one of the sacke he discovered that it was marked with the name of a well-known farmer on the Indiana side of the river. Word was immediately sent to Mr. K., and on Sunday a warrant was issued at Mauckport for the purpose of cearching the hoat, &c., and if sufficient evidence was found, of stresting the thieves.
